SUMMARY.

General Sir John Maxwell reports that he believes the task of the Irish rebellion has been accomplished. The rebels are much more satisfactory, and it is believed the rebellion has been broken. A rebel leader messengers to the rebels in various countries ordering a surrendere.

The rebels still hold Belfast, but a general call among the rebel leaders' regiments Dublin.

In Dublin, the rebels are believed to be besieging Carlisle and Dunlougher before being forced to retreat.

Two corps of troops encircle Dublin, the first around the heart of the city, the second around the suburbs.

The first corps is stationary, but the second is contracting as the troops clear control of the city.

There is evidence that the revolt was carefully planned. The whole of Dublin had been surveyed for strategic positions.

Some of the saddest incidents were the arrival of soldiers on leave, and unable to reach their homes.

A rebel proclamation claims the right of Ireland to be unfeudalized, and the rebels have been sent to the British Parliament to demand its recognition.

Mr. Philip Gibbs, writing of the gallantry of the 16th Lancers at Louisa, says the Dublin revolt is hateful to the men.

The "Tatler" of Leipzig says "Our hearts burn to see that the rebels are foolish to say we have no revolution."

"The Daily Chronicle" says it is probable that the British will introduce a general mobilization.

This paper adds, has been made inevitable by the hard logic of events, however, now we may dislike it.

cused of insulting King Constantine.

A British detachment landed at Thessaloniki on April 20, and is now advancing that the road would be blocked.

It is reported that a French force has occupied Matra, a seaport in Asia Minor, which they are making a naval base.

General Rauti's mounted force has captured large quantities of stores in the vicinity of Kavala.

M. Hughes was deeply impressed by his visit to the sea.

Relations between the Cabinet and the P.L.L. Conference yesterday still were uncertain.

Confidence arrived at did not tend to make the position any clearer regarding the Governor-General's course.

Confidence refused to withdraw the vote of confidence in the Government, but did not ask for the resignation of the Ministry.

General Rauti moved that the decision should be left to the people.

He simply want of confidence in the government.

The proposed audience was negatived by it to 45.

The matter will again be transferred to the Senate room, and a meeting has been called for this morning.

In political circles the position of the cabinet is regarded as critical.

Confidence passed a motion that a Treaty be given to the Senate, but limiting its duration of interest.

Mr. G. R. W. McDonald, member for Bligh, yesterday resigned his seat in the Legislative Assembly.

He is understood that the political domination of the P.L.L. executive.

Eastern Carpets

Beard
Watson's

Some one said of Oriental Rugs: "They are interesting if you don't know them; they are fascinating if you do." The better kind are more than mere utilitarian products of goat's wool, attractive as a covering for the bare floor and a soft treadling place for the feet, they are the spontaneous and free expression of an art which quickened the hand-woven yarn with the beauty of colour poetry, and symbolism of the East.

Peace was implied by the antelope; fame and honor by the leopard; life by the phoenix; uncertainty of victory by a blue lion; victory by a red lion; happy fortune by the swastik; immortality by the lotus flower, and so on.

We have always carried a special stock of beautiful Eastern Rugs and Carpets, and every now and then we receive small but costly bundles of exquisite weaves and colorings, and, although we mention these, we do not forget the lower priced Carpets and Rugs that modern machinery and increased facility of transport has brought within the reach of all. We should be happy to show you some very interesting and remarkable Persians just to hand.

REVOLT

ALMOST OVER.

SEVEN HUNDRED ARRESTS.

THE WEST.

FRENCH AIRMEN ACTIVE

General Sir John Maxwell says he believes the back of the rebellion in Ireland has been broken.

Over seven hundred persons have been imprisoned. The leaders have sent messages to the provinces ordering a surrender.

An unofficial message mentions that Galway and Wexford remain the most serious centres of unrest.

The revolt in Dublin was carefully planned. The whole city was surveyed, and strategic positions were seized.

Four Fokkers and three other aeroplanes have been brought down by the French.

The German newspapers are jubilant over the surrender of General Townshend at Kut-el-Amara.

The "Daily Chronicle" says it is probable that when the House of Commons meets Mr. Asquith will introduce a bill to provide for general compulsion.

SUBMARINES.

BASE IN SPAIN.

FRENCH ALLEGATION.

PARIS, April 30.

The "Journal" says that Germany is keeping wireless stations on the coast of Spain adjacent to Barcelona, and there are dire proofs that submarines are repaired and refitted in the vicinity.

An instance is given when a commander-left and righted with the German fleet.

Twenty-four hours later two British ships were sunk in the vicinity. The command of the submarine returned to tell the crew towards the shore. It is explained that he was waiting to sink two other British ships.

THE BLOCKADE.

INTERVIEW WITH BRITISH ADMIRAL.

LONDON, April 30.

The Prime Minister of Australia, Mr. Hughes, was deeply impressed by his visit to the fleet. When interviewed he said: "I have seen the mightiest instrument of power ever fashioned by man. Stretching over the far horizon are great grey shapes in numbers seemingly endless, whose ample cover the Empire has rested since the outbreak of war, and still rests in perfect security. I have spoken with the men into whose hands the Empire has entrusted her care."

WILL NOT FAIL US.

I am content and satisfied that these are the men who will not fail us. They realise that upon them rests the safety not only of Britain and the Empire, but of civilization. They are quietly confident because the pulses of youth leap in their veins, and in them is the moral force springing from the most glorious traditions. In them is the spirit which led Drake and Nelson to victory, and we may bend our every energy to the prosecution of the war with the certain assurance that Britain's command of the seas is safe in their hands.

WESTERN FRONT.

AIR WARFARE.
FOUR FOKKERS BROUGHT DOWN.

PARIS, May 1. A communiqué says: We captured a trench north of Mort Homme (in the Verdun sector, west of the Meuse), taking some prisoners. We repelled three attempted surprises at Ban de Sept, Tete-de-Faux, and south of Largny in the Vesves, in each case inflicting losses.

Chaser planes brought down an Albatros in the Blaine Valley in the Argonne. The machine was intact, and two officers were taken prisoners.

We brought down two Fokker machines in the region of Roys, and two others at Les Eparges and Douaumont. We pursued five aircraft which were dropping bombs south of Verdun, and brought down three.

It is officially reported that during an air fight at Mulhouse (Lorraine) the tank of the Frenchman's machine was pierced. Finding that his machine was ablaze, and that escape was hopeless, he precipitated his biplane against that of the German. Both aircraft perished, the bodies being carbonised.

GALLANT SHROPSHIRENS.

The feet of the King's Shropshirens in recapturing the trench which was lost on the night of the 9th ult. on the Ypres-Langeais road was carried out with great gallantry and endurance, and amidst rents of rain.

"No Man's Land" was honeycombed with mine-craters and shell-holes, and the entire ground was a churned-up area and storm-filled morass. The men occasionally bounded up to their armits in liquid mud. They were soon half across 200 yards of bogland, mostly progressing on all fours, throwing their rifles in advance, crawling up to them, and then repeating the process.

The enemy was taken by surprise. The main trench was almost deserted owing to the floods. A sharp hand-to-hand fight on two traverses enabled the Shropshirens to secure and consolidate their position. Two counter-attacks were easily repulsed.

GERMAN GAS ATTACK.

Mr. Philip Gibbs gives details of the gallant conduct of the 16th Irish Division at Loos last week, when they broke up a German gas attack. While the Sinn Feiners were besieging the honours of Ireland the Irish Division in France were proving that there are no politics in the army. The Dublin revolt is hateful to the men in the trenches.

The Irish troops holding a chalkpit at Hulme experienced a hellish bombardment on the 27th. Day and night the whole of the Loos salient was throbbing with high explosives. The officers rallied the men with the cry: "Steady, boys. Then, at 5 o'clock in the morning there was a sudden shout of warning. The gas division donned their helmets. Amid the smoke and fire the rebels' gas shells were used, which are arriving daily. There were fires in several parts of the city, for which the rebels were often responsible, hoping to escape under cover of the smoke. A spirit store, which was on fire on Friday night, afforded a wonderful spectacle, long tongues of flame shooting up towards the sky and illuminating the city. There was a big explosion at midnight, which destroyed the rebels' largest ammunition depot, killing many. This had much to do with the surrender of the German infantry."

The Dublin Fusiliers fiercely replied to the attack. A German officer and 47 dead were left entrapped in the barbel wire at one point. A second attack was dispersed after more gas. The enemy reached a portion of the Inniskilling Dublin trenches, but a counter-attack ejected them in half an hour. This was the first time this Irish Division had been in action, but the young soldiers were magnificently cool.

THE FLEET.

MR. HUGHES'S VISIT.

"OUR INVULNERABLE NAVY."

LONDON, May 1.

The Prime Minister of Australia, Mr. Hughes, was deeply impressed by his visit to the fleet. When interviewed he said: "I have seen the mightiest instrument of power ever fashioned by man. Stretching over the far horizon are great grey shapes in numbers seemingly endless, whose ample cover the Empire has rested since the outbreak of war, and still rests in perfect security. I have spoken with the men into whose hands the Empire has entrusted her care."

CAREFULLY PLANNED.

There is evidence that the revolt was carefully planned. The whole city was surveyed and strategic positions were seized and motor cars taken. The tyres were punctured and the cars were overturned and piled up as barricades. Tram cars also were used for telephone and a wireless installation on the roof of the Imperial Hotel, but their ambulances and hospital equipment were poor. They manufactured at home ammunition, including bombs from milk cans filled with shrapnel. There was even a rebel newspaper entitled "Irish War News," including interviews with members of the "New Cabinet."

THIRTEEN SIGHNS FEINERS.

Thirteen Sinn Feiners quickly walked up to the gate of Dublin Castle. A policeman put up his hand, and instantly the Sinn Feiners shot him dead. This was the first casualty. Two hundred others turned the public out of Saint Stephen's Green Park and commenced to dig trenches.

Others raided the post-office and seized the railway stations. The people of Dublin were slow to realise the situation.

The Government was utterly unprepared. The rebels had held telephone to the bridge, has gone. Fire has taken hold on Eden Quay from North Earl-street to the Customs-house. The fire is racing in North Earl-street and in Marlborough-street.

In desperation the rebels are shedding their uniforms and donning women's dress.

Some are armed with shot guns, the shot replaced with ugly pieces of steel, which inflict jagged wounds.

"ILL SETTLE YOU."

There were many women among the rebels, some wearing a green uniform and smart green slouch hat. One was seen to kill an officer by striking him on the head with the butt end of a rifle. Armed, and in a male Sinn Feiner's uniform, she confronted a wounded officer and said: "You are not worth a cartridge. I'll settle you with the butt." She thereupon clubbed the officer on the head.

Gallantly the rebels fought on the head of Meath and Lombard.

THE POPE'S FEARS.

The Pope is fearful lest the clergy should be implicated in the rebellion in Ireland, thereby imperilling the newly-established relations between Britain and the Vatican, which were ratified by Mr. Asquith's visit.

Hence the urgent message to Archbishop Walsh ordering Catholics to co-operate with the Government in every way.

GERMANY'S HOPE.

The German newspapers hope the Irish rising will succeed. The "Tagesschau" (Leipzig) says: Our hearts are with the rebels, but it is foolish to say we fomented the rebellion.
